

Communication Stations

Communication Stations

Stations are logical or physically bounded groups of tags (objects of I/O Tag type), for which the communication process acquires current values in the same way (the same line mode, protocol, Station address, etc.). The object of Station type is assigned to a communication line, by means of which it communicates with the hardware representing the station. The station definition contains parameters, which are necessary for communication with stations.

Object hierarchy - Communication process, Line, Station, I/O Tag

Related pages:

Communication stations - configuration dialog box
Communication protocol parameters
Values of communication stations