

Communication Stations

Communication stations

Stations are logical or physically bounded groups of tags (objects of I/O Tag type), for which the communication process with environment acquires current values by the same way (line mode, protocol, station address, etc.). Object of Station type appertains to a communication line, by means of which there exists a communication with the hardware represents the station. Station definition comprises parameters, which are necessary for communication with stations.

Object hierarchy - Communication process, Line, Station, I/O Tag

Related pages:

Communication stations - configuration dialog box
Communication protocol parameters
Values of communication stations